Universal – The Treasure of Families

That any far-reaching decisions of economists and politicians may protect the family as one of the treasures of humanity.

IN TESTIMONIUM...

This week I had wanted to be able to tell you about the National Catholic Classical Schools Conference which I attended recently at Catholic University along with our new Headmaster, Jeff Presberg. The Institute for Classical Liberal Education (ICLE) put on the event and even included our very own Michael Ortner as one of the plenary speakers. An article about it and us recently appeared in the Arlington Catholic Herald. It was a great week.

The Herald went to press just a day too early to be able to include the news that Mary Pat Donoghue, Director of School Services for the Institute for Catholic Liberal Education, has just been appointed as the new Executive Director of the Secretariat of Catholic Education for the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB). Mary Pat was the founding Headmaster of St. Jerome Academy in Hyattsville, Maryland, when it made its now famous move to a classical curriculum. I could not be more encouraged by the USCCB having hired her.

Instead I have to talk about criminal Cardinals and capital punishment. It may seem a week too late but we do have our own turn-around time with which to contend. The solution would have been easier a week ago: anyone found to commit a crime against the innocence of a child should have a millstone tied to his neck and be thrown into the river. But now I can't say that. If solitary confinement for life sounds worse than the death penalty, let's agree to compromise.

Speaking of compromise, let's see who is willing to ban both the death penalty and abortion by the same legislative act. I know many traditionally--minded folks who would go for that in a second.

On a different but related note I can say that any spouse caught in and genuinely repentant of the sin of adultery can be forgiven and even restored to the common life. A cleric caught in a similar sin should be punished more severely. While we mull over the no-longer-secret sins of Cardinals, can anyone tell me why Archbishop Weakland still has a public ministry? In the meantime I can tell you that even as a seminarian twenty-some years ago I heard about purportedly bad habits with (gulp) seminarians practiced by Archbishop McCarrick. The allegations were common knowledge. His predation against minors, however, could not have been known widely. Seminarians hear every rumor, even the false ones. The Holy See apparently knew about Uncle Ted's bedroom policy at the New Jersey Shore. The word I heard is that those who complained about it found out later that the eventual Archbishop of Washington was only told to get rid of the beach house. I have to admit that I am genuinely surprised that no American bishop has brought this to light in their own defense. At the time it was crushing to my confidence I had in the system.

There is no cavalry. We have to rely on each other.

God have mercy on us. Christ, save us.

As you take on each challenge, plan some time at the end of the day to reflect on your successes and all the ways you can live your Christian mission more fully! Join thousands who are already watching!

Every week, a featured priest from the Catholic Diocese of Arlington will give his take on the Sunday Gospel reading, and use it as inspiration behind the week's challenge! Look out for your own parish priest, and experience the wisdom of so many priests in our own diocese! "If you want to change the world, you need to know Jesus."

Jesus knows that our stewardship journey will be difficult; we are not designed to do it on our own. Fortunately, Jesus gave us the greatest gift of all – the gift of the Eucharist; His own body and blood. When we join our sacrifices with the sacrifice of the Mass, we find the strength and courage to be His joyful disciples.

FROM THE SEMINARIAN...

Last week I assisted at Arlington's Quo Vadis camp. The goal was to teach the boys to be open to God's will for their lives, to guide them into thinking more deeply about virtue and holiness, and to encourage them to be open to a call to the priesthood or the religious life. As the boys encountered Jesus that week, they had a choice to make: Would they follow Him, or would they choose their own path? We must also choose. Are we willing to follow Jesus, committed to being with Him in Heaven, or have we settled on getting to Purgatory? If we've settled on Purgatory, understand we run the risk of not making it there.

As Catholics, God asks us each day to either choose Him, or choose the culture of death: We cannot serve both God and Mammon. Once we commit to God, and say yes to His will, the Holy Spirit is free to work within us: helping us to grow in holiness, preparing us for Heaven by helping us to become saints. This, however, is entirely dependent on our freely choosing to give God everything, of completely surrendering ourselves to His will. Are we willing to do this, or do we prefer to resist Him? He is reaching out to us and are we willing to let Him guide us?

The Church has a number of great spiritual masters who can guide us in discerning the will of God for our lives through their spiritual exercises. One is St. Ignatius of Loyola whom I have discussed over the past few weeks. In addition to his exercises, I recommend beginning each day with A Morning Offering and a simple prayer: Lord Jesus, help me become holy and help me become a saint, and then repeat it before you go to bed in the evening along with an examination of conscience. Be docile to the Holy Spirit, and also ask our Blessed Mother to help us become true Christian men and women: true examples of virtue and holiness like the saints, not the corrupted version the secular culture pushes. God will then open our eyes to opportunities to serve Him and others and receive an abundance of His grace.

This is my final column, so I bid you all farewell until the next time I see you. A big thank you to Frs. Pollard, Sina and Kabore for their mentorship over the last few weeks. Thank you also to all of you for your warm welcome, the summer has truly been incredible, and I've learned so much and please pray for me as I go into my second year of Philosophy at Mount St. Mary's Seminary. I'm very proud to call St. John the Beloved my parish, a parish that the Holy Spirit guided me to right after I converted, and one whose reputation for piety, orthodoxy and warmth is well known and rightfully admired. God bless.
